Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

1. Claims 1,2,9,19,24-28, and 30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by LaCount US 4,708,382. LaCount discloses a lifting hook comprising a shaft (26) of the load hook mounted in the recess of a carrier body 930) and able to turn about a vertical axis (col. 1, lines 22-25), said shaft mounted in a continuous bore (44) of a support element (40) and thrust against the carrier body by at least one axial bearing (80); said shaft being mounted in the carrier body by a bearing arrangement comprising said support element, said at least one axial bearing, and a retaining ring (66) surrounding said shaft; said bearing arrangement being secured by a fastening element (68) in said carrier body; said retaining ring is fastened by a securing element (50) in said carrier body; said support element (40) forms an upper shell of said axial bearing; the fastening element comprises a snap-ring (68); said shaft of the load hook is secured on said support element by a securing element, which in the assembled condition engages an undercut (29) at the free end of said shaft and is arranged in an indentation of said support element (see Figure 3); said securing element comprises a snap-ring (68); said undercut is fashioned as a peripheral annular groove (29); said undercut is configured as a tapering (machine taper 28) of the shaft cross section, proceeding from the free end of the shaft (see Figure 4); wherein at least one chosed from said support element (40) have a planar bearing surface (49) for said axial bearing; wherein said support element (40) forms an upper shell (49) of said axial bearing.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claim 29 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over LaCount in view of Anderson et al. US 2,823,944. LaCount discloses ball bearings (80) around the shank of the hook, not needle roller bearings. Anderson et al discloses a load hook including roller bearings (43 and 44) provided around the shank (37) of the hook (36). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill at the time of the invention to modify the arrangement of LaCount with roller bearings as taught by Anderson et al. because roller bearings are used instead of ball bearings for heavier radial loads.

3. Claim 38 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over LaCount in view of Hoover et al US 2,500,459. LaCount does not disclose a recessed handle in the carrier body. Hoover et al discloses a load hook with a recessed handle (20) located in the housing body (A). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill at the time of the invention to provide the load hook of LaCount with a recessed handle as taught by Hoover et al. in order for an operator to easily maneuver the apparatus.

4. Claim 39 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over LaCount in view of Fanger et al US 5,851,039. LaCount does not disclose the hook connected to two cable rollers of a lower block. Fanger et al discloses a lower block apparatus with two cable rollers or pulleys (3). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill at the time of the invention to combine the hook of LaCount with a lower block sytem of two pulleys in order to raise and lower loads.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 3-8 and 20-23 objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
